EXT. OFFICE 1 - DAY

A CYCLIST pulls up to an office block. A WORKER runs out to meet them.

WORKER

Thank you for coming on such short notice! We need you to take this to the usual address.

The Worker hands over a USB stick. The Cyclist inspects it.

CYCLIST

It's smaller than usual.

WORKER

But the pay's double if you're fast.

CYCLIST

You're on.

MONTAGE

Then we have a cool action bit where the cyclist takes the USB across town, down alleys, across parks, etc. Maybe we can affix a gopro to the handlebars (or their helmet?), put a 360 camera on a stick, etc.

EXT. OFFICE 2 - LATER

As the cyclist pulls up, the RECIPIENT of the USB runs out to meet them.

RECIPIENT

Thank god you've made it! You have the drive?

Cyclist goes to hand it over, but snatches it back at the last second.

CYCLIST

I understood that I was to be paid on delivery.

RECIPIENT

Of course. Do you take card?

CYCLIST

Is that a joke?

Judging by the look on the recipient's face, it was not.

CYCLIST (CONT'D)

All comms are down. That's why I'm here. Cash only.

RECIPIENT

Can we try it anyway?

They do. It doesn't work. Recipient keeps slapping their card on the contactless reader.

With a sigh, the cyclist puts the reader away--

RECIPIENT

Call me when you have cash.

FADE OUT.
